Art Unit: 1632

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on August 11, 2006 has been entered.

The following is a quotation of the first paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall contain a written description of the invention, and of the manner and process of making and using it, in such full, clear, concise, and exact terms as to enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the same and shall set forth the best mode contemplated by the inventor of carrying out his invention.

Claims 1 and 3-5 and 8-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, because the specification, while being enabling for a transgenic mouse whose genome comprises a homozygous defect of a Caspase-9 gene, wherein said mouse lacks functional Caspase-9 and exhibits reduced apoptosis in brain, spinal cord, dexamethasone-treated lymphocytes, cardiac muscle, or smooth muscle, or reduced apoptosis associated with viral infection and a method of producing transgenic mouse whose genome comprises a homozygous defect of a Caspase-9 gene, does not reasonably provide enablement for mice where the genetic modification is not integrated into the genome. The specification does not enable any person skilled in the art to which it pertains, or with which it is most nearly connected, to make and use the invention commensurate in scope with these claims.

The claims are drawn to a genetically altered mouse deficient in functional caspase-9 expression due to a defective caspase-9 gene, wherein in a homozygous mutation in said defective caspase-9 gene causes reduced apoptosis in brain, spinal cord, dexamethasone-treated thymocytes, cardiac muscle, or smooth muscle, or reduced apoptosis associated with viral infection, and methods of making the genetically altered mouse.

Art Unit: 1632

The rejection is directed to the claims encompassing a genetically altered mouse where the defect is not integrated into the genome, but may occur as an extrachromosomal DNA molecule. The only enablement is when the defective in the caspase-9 gene occurs within the genome.

Thus, at the time of instant invention, the skilled artisan would have needed to engage in an undue amount of experimentation without a predictable degree of success to implement the invention as claimed.

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1, 3-5 and 8-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention.

The claims are confusing as they read on a mouse having a defective caspase-9 gene and another genetic alteration. There is no correlation between the genetic alteration and a defective caspase-9 gene.

The claims are free of the prior art. At the time of filing the prior art did not teach or suggest a genetically altered mouse deficient in functional Caspase-9 expression due to a defective Caspase-9 gene, wherein a homozygous mutation in said defective Caspase-9 gene causes reduced apoptosis in brain, spinal cord, dexamethasone-treated lymphocytes, cardiac muscle, or smooth muscle, or reduced apoptosis associated with viral infection and a method of producing a genetically altered mouse deficient in functional Caspase-9 expression due to a defective Caspase-9 gene.
